Moving Forward: The Next Civil Rights Frontier It's Time for a Plan to Guide African American Children's Journey Through School

This online meeting is designed to create a long-term strategy for closing the academic achievement gap that affects African American children. Speakers have been invited to critique existing strategies from the private and public sector. Activists who want to join the FIGHT for educational equity for African American children in terms of equality of resources and outcomes should attend.

Saturday, April 28, 2012
