It's Time for a Plan to Guide

African American Children's Journey Through School

This meeting will combine the features of a lecture series, roundtable discussion and working conference. Come to hear some of the most creative thinkers in the African American community outline the situation that prevents African American children from reaching their potential. Come to contribute to the strategy for creating a solution. There will be opportunities for audience dialogue and meetings of Action Groups to design a plan for change.

Speakers

Dr. V.P. Franklin, Presidential Professor, University of California Riverside, Editor Journal of African American History

Dr. William H. Watkins, Professor, University of Illinois at Chicago

Dr. James C. Young, Professor, Clark Atlanta University

Dr. Carol Brunson Day, President & CEO National Black Child Development Institute
